THE ROCKY MOUNTAINS command an entire issue of Holiday Magazine!

The great domain of the Rockles is the astonishment of men the world over. Those who live in the presence of its spectacular beauties say that the Rocky Mountain man, more than any other, somehow stays on top of life.

In a sweeping tribute to Rocky Mountain significance. Holiday Magazine in August explores some of the reasons why. From Pikes Peak to the wild waters of St. Mary Lake in Montana, from Utah's Great Salt Lake to the golden plains of Santa Fe, from Aspen to Boulder, Cheyenne, Laramie, Butte and north through Canada, Holiday's camera climbs to the mountain thrusts, tiptoes in on the wildlife sanctuaries, roams the bronze deserts. A splendor of photography by John Lewis Stage illuminates the Rockies and one of their greatest living secrets: some 10 million years old, they have the effect of making the man who happens upon them feel suddenly young.

Holiday's narration of the history of the Rockies is an exuberant reading experience. A. B. Guthrie, Jr., writes of the Rockies and their big sky. Gene Caesar describes the splendor of Yellowstone Country. Peter Feibleman writes on the ancestral history of the Pueblos to the South, and the green-forested grandeur of the Sangre de Cristos is a fascinating feature by Jack Schaefer. Great articles and great photography make the giant come alive, from the peaks and plains to the 6 million acres of primeval wilderness and the extraordinary geological sculpturesa monumental pause in time—that are the glory of the eight Rocky Mountain states and two Canadian provinces. August Holiday is big reading. Pick up a copy todayl

RINGWORM OF THE FEET IN BOYS

A group of London dermatolo gists conducted a study on ringworm of the feet in 400 boys, aged 13 to 18, living in school boarding houses. Abnormalities between the toes such as peeling, cracks, and blisters showed in 271, but the lesions were caused by fungal infections in only half this number This demonstrates the importance of doing microscopic tests on scrapings from the skin between the toes rather than to conclude that all scaling is ringworm.

On the other hand these physiclass made ringworm tests on the toes of every boy in the school. The results were positive in 123 of the old students and in 3 new students. Further studies revealed that the longer the lad was in school, the more likely he was to acquire a few fungi on the skin between the toes.

The causative fungal organisms were present on the skin of 18 boys who had no lesions. These students were watched carefully and, when examined six months later, 16 of the 18 had the beginning signs of ringworm. There was peeling of the skin between the toes in 14, and the dermatologists decided this is the earliest manifestation. The fungi live on the skin for some time and enter when resistance is lowered.

The rapid rise in the incidence of the infection during the first two years at school suggested that the organisms are spread from person to person, possibly from walking barefoot on contaminated floors. This is an example of the pendulum swinging back to the wet floors of showers, and around swimming pools as the culprit in the transmission of disease. This manner of spreading fungi has been downgraded in recent years.

The British dermatologists had a chance to compare three forms of treatment. The undecylenic acid aerosol spray gave the best resuits (87.8 per cent). But the old faithful, inexpensive Whitfield's ointment and dusting powder. were not far behind with an $6.5 per cent good results. An English product, Teoquil gel and powder was far behind. Oral fungicides were not used in this survey. As a preventive, the British physicians suggest drying the feet thoroughtly after bathing, the anplication of salicylic acid dusting powder, and wearing slippers to avoid direct contact with wet

Dr. Van Dellen will send leaflet on ringworm of the feet if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.
